

ROSENBLUM'S TWO NEPHEWS IN JAIL DENY GUILT

Agler Brothers Declare They Know Nothing of Windber Trunk Murder.

BOTH ARRESTED HERE.

Widow and Daughter of Merchant Swear They Aided Slayer.

In a cell, up on the top tier of the men's side of the Tombs, are two very frightened Yiddish boys—typical East Siders—Joe and Louis Agler by name, who halt the passing turnkeys and prison chaplains and the prison physicians, as these functionaries go along the corridor, to protest vehemently, and with as many gestures as the intervening bars will permit, that they don't know anything about it, so help them, meaning by that the now famous trunk murder of Camden.

This pair were locked up Monday by Headquarters detectives, after Mrs.
Bessie Rosenbloom, who is in jail at Baltimore, had owned up to the man in the trunk was her husband, Samuel J. Rosenbloom.

Named by Both Women.

In the confession of the widow, and also in the subsequent confession of her sixteen-year-old daughter Eva, the admission was made that after the son Alex Rosenbloom had killed the old man he kept the body in a cellar of their home for twenty-four hours, and then with the aid of the two Aglers, nephews of the old man, took the body away, corded up in a trunk.

According to Mrs. Rosenbloom's story of the crime, the Aglers were called into consultation at Windber to discuss ways and means of disposing of the victim.
The brothers went away, she said, and came back that night with a covered wagon. With the trunk in the wagon she claims her nephews drove to Johnstown, Pa., where they lived, and shipped it to Camden. Then having, as they thought, broken the trail, she alleges that they again secured the trunk and carried it to the woods near Bellmawr, where it was found.

Yesterday afternoon Joe and Louis were arraigned in Centre Street Police Court as fugitives from justice, and sent to the Tombs to await extradition. They say they have no objection to going to Windber, or anywhere else where they may be wanted.

An Evening World reporter saw them this morning in their quarters under the roof of the big jail. They sat in their shirt sleeves, side by side, on the narrow cot, black-eyed, furtive, unhappy looking youths, one sixteen and the other twenty-three years old. Joe, the elder, did most of the talking.

"Our lawyer told us not to say anything," was the way he began.

"Who is your lawyer?" asked the caller.

"We don't know his name," came in a plaintive chorus from the brothers, "only that a want he said. But we didn't never do it—honest, we didn't."

Then Joe Agler went on:

"Never Even Fought.

"We never hurt anybody. We never quarrelled with anybody. We never even had a fight with anybody. Ask anybody at Johns-town where we were working—if we ain't nice fellows."

"Sure, we'll go back if they want us.
We don't know anything about Uncle Rosenbloom and his killing."

"And you help to carry the trunk away containing his body?"

"We never saw any trunk."

"We were working at Johns-town."

Monroe street, No. 120, where we live."

"We can prove it, if they give us a chance, can't we Louis?"

And Louis, with arms, shoulders, eyes wide and hands free, insisted that they undoubtedly could.

The jail officials say they never had an unseparated pair of prisoners in their keeping. Every day who passes through the corridor has to stop and listen to their ever-flowing flood of denials, and most of those who hear the Aglers believe they are quillies.

USED HIS OWN TRUCK AS AN AMBULANCE

Driver, Bleeding From Five Wounds, Calmly Hitched Horses Before Entering.

Arthur Schmidt, a truck driver, halted his team in front of St. Gregory's Hospital, in Gold street, today, calmly hitched his horses, walked in and asked for aid.

"I'm all cut up," he said. "A dog stabbed me over in Hoboken."

Five knife wounds were found by Dr.
Hiscock in Schmidt's back and three in the back of his head. If he had delayed going to the hospital he probably would have died.

Schmidt lives at No. 113 Madison street, Hoboken, and drives a truck for Paul Moran. Two days ago, he said, he met a man whom he knows only as Tony, another driver, in a narrow street and there was a wordy dispute over the right of way.

Schmidt thought no more about it until this morning. When he was on his way to the hospital street ferry he again met Tony, who this time jumped from his wagon and leaping upon Schmidt began stabbing him. Then he ran away and Schmidt continued on his trip to New York. The wounds are not serious.

B. R. T. GIVES HEALTH HINTSON OPEN CARS

Rainy Day Passengers Advised How to Ward Off Consumption.

Following its invariable custom, the B. R. T. made its patrons as uncon-formable to-day by furnishing them with open cars on the "L." The usual number of open cars was run on the various open car lines. These cars, considered only by curtains, were moving imitations of aquariums.

The seats were wet and the floors were covered with water. But the B.
R. T. is not unmindful of the health of its patrons.

Each passenger who pays a fare below the five-cent fare boundary is compelled to act as a spotter for himself by retaining a ticket, which is delivered to the conductor as the train runs from the surface lines of South Brooklyn to the "L."

On the back of each of these tickets is printed the following notice:

"It is plain to be seen that if the patrons of the B. R. T. contract consumption by riding in open cars in autumnal storms, they cannot say that the B. R. T. did not warn them."

WIDOW, PENNILESS, ENDS LIFE BY GAS

Daughter Finds Mrs. Annie Bryld Dead in Her Room in Brooklyn Home.

Grief over her widowhood and despair over the spending of her last dollar caused Mrs. Annie Bryld, thirty-five years old of No. 35 Patchen avenue, Brooklyn, to kill herself with gas early to-day. She had been dead several hours when a baker awakened her sixteen-year-old daughter, Eva.

Seven weeks ago the woman's husband died. He left little more than enough insurance to bury him. Mrs.
Bryld pined along on what was left until yesterday when she announced to her daughter that they were penniless.
She said nothing about suicide, but when her daughter went to bed the mother was careful to secure the door of the girl's bedroom, locking herself in her own room and fastening the windows.

The daughter heard her mother moving about until after midnight. When the body was found it was fully dressed. The bed had not been slept in.

4,000 TAILORS QUIT WORK IN BROOKLYN

Five Contractors Accept New Scale and That Many Shops Are Open.

About four thousand tailors in Brooklyn and the Bronx went on strike in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn today, following the example set by their brothers of the needle in Manhattan.

This takes in the workmen in sixty-five shops and leaves only five shops operating. The men, while acting in sympathy with the New York tailors, act independently, on their own account, and have their own union—Nos. 7 and 8. They demand union wages and contracts signed and confirmed for the ensuing year. They have already secured to these demands.

The tailors, who are banded under the name of the United Garment Workers of America, held a meeting last night at the Hotel Hamilton, No. 126 West 42d street, and decided to strike tomorrow. It is understood that a large number of the strikers have been busy for several weeks.

Still your chance remains to furnish that dining-room at the low August prices. When you stop to think that the handsome Dining Table at $50 or the Sideboard you fancy at $85 would regularly cost $73 and $125, doesn't it seem wise to make the decision NOW?

While we illustrate the point today with Dining-room Furniture, the same holds true of bedroom, parlor and library furniture, too—and it is all so good that the man that buys THE VERY LAST PIECE IN THE SALE will have a prize upon which he can look, long afterward, as a good investment. Years of selling furniture of real merit in these sales have rightfully earned for them the character they bear.

Showing the splendid choice still remaining among the Dining-room Furniture:

At $9.75, from $14, there is a Golden Oak Extension Table with a 42-inch round top, 6 ft. long when extended; square pillar with shaped legs. Or at $18, from $22, a Quartered Golden Oak Table, 45-inch round top, 6 ft. size, round pillar with shaped legs and claw feet.

Another Table with a very beautifully figured quartered oak top, 48-inch round top, 8 ft. long when extended, large pillar with claw feet, at $32, instead of $38.

A Mahogany Table with a 44-inch top and 8 ft. size, has a deep rim, round pillar, shaped legs and claw feet, at $35, instead of $50.

Or one may skip through a whole lot of Tables and find one in mahogany that is very richly carved, with a top 66 in. in diameter, the edge of which is carved, the entire construction and finish being of the highest possible class, and the price is $200, instead of $235. Or at $350, from $400, you will find a Mahogany Breakfast Table which does not extend, and the top of which is a solid piece of mahogany, 64 in. in diameter, and about 3 in. thick. This is perhaps the finest table of its kind in America.

There is a very pretty China Cabinet of Colonial design, with glass door and ends and claw feet, at $22, instead of $32. Another one, with swell front and ends, in quartered golden oak, is $26, instead of $35. One in weathered oak, on Mission lines, has two doors, a mirror back of the top shelf, a drawer in the base, and the price is $30, instead of $42.

At $35, instead of $45, another Weathered Oak China Cabinet on Mission lines, has a solid base with full-length door; of fine construction and finish. At $50, instead of $60, there is a very good Quartered Golden Oak China Cabinet, with bent glass ends, side columns and glass door. A plain neat design in mahogany of medium size, is priced at $30, from $35.

Another one, in Colonial design, of mahogany, with fluted legs and side columns and a wood lattice over the door and ends, is $50, instead of $70.

A pretty little Crystal Closet in quartered golden oak, with glass shelves and mirror back, is $25, instead of $32.

A Mahogany Three-piece Dining-room Suite of Colonial design, with wood knob drawer pulls, is $65, instead of $110. A Quartered Golden Oak Threepiece Suite of neat design and good finish is $72 instead of $110.

An important purchase of about eight hundred handsome Sample Waists offers especially varied choosing at a comfortable saving in price. The waists are all new, in attractive Fall models, in lace, net, taffeta, messaline and plaid silk, and crepe de Chine—in black and colors, long or short sleeves. Some French models are in the lot. New prices, and regular values, are as follows:

$2.75, regularly $5. $3.75, regularly $6.50. $5, regularly $7.50 to $10. $6.50, regularly $12 to $15.

Also a clean-up of Women's Lawn and Batiste Waists—a pretty assortment. The trimmings, of fine embroideries, German Valenciennes and imitation baby Irish laces and plaids, are too varied for description. Open back or front, sleeves prettily trimmed. Some of the waists are slightly mused. Now $3 and $3.75 each, were $5 to $7.50.

New creased hats for men are here to-day—the Paris Alpines—their mates are being shown in the Boulevard shops at this moment.

Unlike any of their American cousins in shape, colors or texture. The moderate trim is rolling, and finished with buttonholing—and we had the bow of the broad band of matching ribbon put on the side, though in you wish it the true Continental way, you can have it moved to the back. The colors, green, gray and brown, testify to the cleverness of the French masters of coloring.
